The screenshot shows the BrowserStack Live dashboard. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'Dashboard' and other tabs like 'Automate', 'App Live', 'App Automate', and 'Products'. Below the navigation is a banner with the text 'Transform your testing process with: Real Device Features, Company-wide Licences, & Accessibility Testing'. A central message says 'Each device is available for up to 1 minute during Free Trial. For full access: Buy a plan'. The main area is a grid of device cards. On the left, there's a sidebar with various icons. The device grid has columns for device type, name, and version. A 'Favourites' section highlights iOS 17.3 Latest, followed by a list of Mac versions from Sonoma down to El Capitan.

The screenshot shows the homepage of the BrowserStack website. At the top, there's a banner with the text "Transform your testing process with: Real Device Features, Company-wide Licences & Accessibility Testing". Below the banner, the main navigation menu includes links for "Products", "Developers", "Resources", "Pricing", "Sign in", and a "FREE TRIAL" button. The main content area features a large heading "Cross browser testing on desktop & mobile" with a subtext: "Millions of QA testers & developers use Live to instantly access 3000+ real browsers & devices and deliver great user experiences." To the right of the text, there's a diagram showing a central Apple logo connected to five other browser icons (Chrome, Firefox, Edge, Opera, and Internet Explorer) arranged in a circle. Below the diagram, there are two screenshots of web pages: one from TechRadar.com showing a personality test, and another from a news site showing a story about a VC. At the bottom, there's a search bar with the placeholder "Search browserstack.com" and a "Start test" button.
